Secretary Sherman, upon being question ed to night with regard to the present move-ment of national banks to retire their circulation, said that this movement of the banks to avoid the operation of the fifth section of the funding bull necessarily brings large sums of money into the Treasury; that, however, it only effects the money market in New York city, where do posits must be made, and draws directly from the banks or the street currency need ed there for business operations. Secretary Sherman says the Treasury can and will pay out this money, as well as the surplus revenue, in payment of bonds for the sinking fund if offered at par and accruing interest; that the Treasury cannot interpose further than to apply its surplus currency in excess of the redemption fund to the reduction of the public debt. Called bonds are preferred; but if these are not offered, maturing 5's and 6's will probably be taken on the same terms-viz., par and accruing interest. Bonds must be sent to Washington to be verified, but will be promptly paid for at any of the principal depositories of the United States.
